The Arctic Coastal Dynamics (ACD) project is convening a workshop to explore development of a coastal erosion model specific to permafrost-dominated coasts. The workshop will take place on June 28, 2008 at the International Arctic Research Center in Fairbanks, Alaska, immediately preceding the Ninth International Conference on Permafrost (NICOP) being held at the University of Alaska.

Model development will involve gaining an overview of the status and extent of existing models, identifying data and process gaps, and deciding on the scope of a new overarching model.

To attend, please contact: acd@awi-potsdam.de
Additional information and updates will be posted at: www.arctic-coastal-dynamics.org